

Peace Society

Declaration of Independence

Through this decree, we declare the existence of the Peace Society. The Peace Society is a North American micronation, founded with the ideals of peace, equality, cooperation, and respect for others. It was established with the hope of creating a community where peace is chosen whenever possible.

The Peace Society fulfills the first article of the Montevideo Convention. The article declares that a state as a person of international law should possess the following qualities: a permanent population, a defined territory, a government, and the capacity to enter into relations with other states.

The first settlement is defined as the home of Espe Wolf, named Plumbago for micronational purposes. The residents of Plumbago are the permanent population. The government is an autocracy, in which the leader has sole and total control. The current leader as of writing is Espe Wolf. The Peace Society has set up avenues to establish virtual contact with other micronations. The Peace Society seeks friendship and peaceful relations with other micronations, guided by the national motto: "Choose Peace."
